The American Society for Mass Spectrometry was formed in 1969 to promote and disseminate knowledge of mass spectrometry and allied topics. Membership includes scientists and other professionals involved in research, development and promotion of mass spectrometry. Members come from academic, industrial and governmental laboratories. Their interests include advancement of techniques and instrumentation in mass spectrometry, as well as fundamental research in chemistry, geology, forensics, biological sciences and physics.

ASMS is one of the most dynamic scientific societies in the world and sponsors the following:

- The Annual Conference on Mass Spectrometry and Allied Topics: an open forum for the presentation of scientific research and the development of new applications and technology.
- Special topic short courses: continuing education for those in the field and introductory courses for those entering the field.
- Journal of the American Society for Mass Spectrometry: a peer reviewed monthly journal with a comprehensive range of research and development in mass spectrometry.
- The Fall Workshop: tutorial education on emerging technology.
- The Asilomar and Sanibel Conferences: highly focused conferences on specific research topics in an informal setting.
- Publications: reprints of classic, out of print mass spectrometry books and educational brochures for scientists and the interested public.

ASMS members receive:

- Subscription to the monthly Journal of the American Society for Mass Spectrometry
- Discounted registration for all conferences and short courses
- Access to private areas of the web site (www.asms.org): the employment center, membership directory, archives of the conference proceedings, archives of the John Wiley mass spectrometry journals, and collection of tutorial lectures
